

Vybory 2002: One Outcome Scenario

The following table has been compiled from two separate sources. One source is Fond Obschestvennoye Mneniya (FOM) a Russian polling firm, that works closely with Fond Effektivnoyi Polityky (FEP), run by Vladimir Putin's PR guru, Hleb Pavlovsky. They provide the data for the % of Popular Vote. The other source is a joint Ukraine-EU website devoted to analyzing the battles for seats in single mandate districts. They provide the estimated number of MPs, and their party/bloc membership, elected in the single mandate races. Taken together, the two provide one possible scenario for the total number of seats for each party and bloc.

PARTIES & BLOCS	LEADERS	% POP. VOTE	SEATS (PARTY LISTS)	SEATS (SINGLE MANDATE)	TOTAL # SEATS
Our Ukraine	Victor Yushchenko	26,7	77	38	115

SDPU(o)	Victor Medvedchuk	9,3	27	6	33

225 Seats by Party List – Based on a FOM (Russia) poll conducted from March 14 – 19, nationwide, 2018 respondents. Results were published on the joint FOM/FEP project: <http://www.ukr.ru/publications/102.html> on March 27, 2002. There you can read a Russian language analysis by an A. Churikov, FOM's technology director. Additional Data provided by FOM findings:

Pass 4% barrier	77,6
Against All*	4,2
Other parties/blocs	18,2
Voter Turn Out	67,2

* – does not count towards number of seats

225 Seats in single mandate constituencies – Based on predictions made by the staff from Shtab Kvartyra – HQ, a joint project by TACIS, the European Union's technical assistance body, and KP Publications (Kyiv Post, Korespondent, etc.). This crew has been detailing each oblast, and the electoral chances of the candidates running on the direct representation ballots. HQ also provides minimum-maximum seats for the parties and blocs in these contests. See <http://www.hq.org.ua/progress/>. In the table above, "Independents" includes 3 "sure winners" from smaller parties: Ukrainian Sea Party, Spravedlyvist and Party for National and Economic Development (PNERU).
